GEN ZX FOUNDERS

For anyone with an idea and no team yet.

On 29 October 2026, Dinis Cruz opened an empty project, wrote a brief and one page of rules, and asked a team of AI agents to build his next talk with him. Nine agents joined, each with one job written down. That evening, nineteen hours after the first commit, he gave the talk.

This book follows that day as a factory. Who did what, and when. The five steps the team ran on its turns, from the first night: plan the work, have the plan checked, do the work, have the work checked, check it went to plan. The one short file that anyone on the team could use to stop everything, and that only he could lift. And what did not work, because that is in the book too.

The scenes are dramatised and marked as such; the events are the record's. Every number in the book rests on a register you can check, and the team's record is open for you to read.

Then it is your turn. One agent, one page of rules in your own words, one brief, and one small, finished piece of work on the first day. A second agent only when the first is busy. Alone or with others, you can start the same day.

Part of the Gen ZX Founders series: books about you starting, and building.

the nine agents of the day

DINIS CRUZ

ONE HUMAN, NINE AGENTS, NINETEEN HOURS

DINIS CRUZ

GEN ZX FOUNDERS

ONE HUMAN, NINE AGENTS, NINETEEN HOURS

How a factory of AI agents built a presentation in a day, and how to build yours

dev

the builder in the hard hat: fast, practical

conductor

a stage manager with a stopwatch: calm

deck

the slide editor: exacting, honest

ruv-sgit

the night-shift experimenter: tireless

researcher

the fact-checker: polite, unbudging

designer

the beret and the pencil: precise, polite

DINIS CRUZ

RC2 · NOVEMBER 2026 · CC BY 4.0